By MAKE Consulting

Industry players positioning themselves to reach first mover advantages in China

The Chinese market is now ready to take off although a supportive legislation has not yet been finally implemented. The wind industry has almost no doubts about where the Chinese market is heading. As mentioned in our market report, The Wind Forecast (October 2005), we now expect the Chinese market to take off for real. The market will soon start to experience major growth. This is based on the general increasing need for energy in China as well as positive expectations to the Chinese government in respect of implementing the pending supportive legislation.
